

An Introduction

Scents are intangible things crucial to our everyday life. They help us taste our food, tell us when we are in danger...

Some scents even help us to remember certain pasts in our lives – the good or the bad.

Here is my attempt at concretizing my good and bad scents with my experiences.

; the bad

the intangible

Moth balls,

they remind me of my childhood, the times I was often left alone in my grandparent's place, where I often felt lonely and unhappy

; the bad

the touchable

The spirals mimic the engulfing smell of the moth balls. It often blends into the environment we are in. Sharp edges are to depict the distinct soft and fresh smell and the burnt edges to depict how the scent allows that unpleasant memory to creep into my mind.

; the good the intangible

White Musk Smoky Rose,

the scent reminds me of my first date. It was one out of the many perfumes my mom has in her collection. I knew I had to smell good, so just like any other girls, I went to my mom's cupboard and picked a random one, I know it won't go wrong.

; the good

the touchable

Wholesome,
I thought the main focus of the structure looks wholesome, somewhat mimicking a heart.

A vulnerable heart, seem to stay afloat through a thin thread holding it in place. Similarly, it depicts my first date experience – vulnerable.

Also, just like the swirling patterns, my first date was fun, interesting and I had a great time, putting my heart out there.

The end.

Credits:

Moth ball images taken from: http:// images.wisegeek.com/colored-moth-balls.jpg

The Body Shop perfume taken from: http://www.thebodyshop.com.au/files/productphotos/2108_0.jpg

Done by Daphne Tan
3D Foundation

20 October 2017