

Conclusion

To conclude, I'm very glad that I pushed myself to conceptualise different methods of presentation of the video format. It is something that as a filmmaker I would rarely think about. But through this semester's class, I really saw how video can be potentially presented more effectively in a space, combined with a certain tactile medium and an accompanying print or object to push its message. I learnt that video can be made to be seen as a painting in a gallery than a film in the cinema and that is video art installation. I'm satisfied with my final project, and I felt that I did make a decent progress from my midterms to extend and expand on my project albeit a better execution with time and budget. At least I have a clear idea of what the project could really become if I had an opportunity and budget to present it as an installation one day.

Thank you Meridel.
